Art 2000 Encountering Contemporary Art (U) 3

In this class, students will explore how and why contemporary artists make the work they do within a globalized art world. Through discussions, readings, virtual or in-person art excursions and related assignments, participants will apply critical written, oral, and visual communication skills as they analyze, interpret and respond to significant works of art, their contexts and histories.

Class #	Day & Time	Delivery Mode	Room	Instructor
16610	TuTh 3:55PM – 5:15PM	DL	Online	Alison Crocetta
Two scheduled, 80-minute classes per week that will be in real-time synchronous mode of distance learning delivery. However, classes will consist of both synchronous and asynchronous activities. During synchronous class periods, students will be engaging regularly in smaller working groups with the instructor via Zoom to discuss concepts and issues related to a range of course content, readings and class assignments. When not in a scheduled zoom meeting, students will be expected to participate in discussion threads on Carmen, conduct research, engage with course readings and other learning activities such as documentary films, short recorded lectures, and related assignments in a self-paced, asynchronous fashion.

Spring 2021 Art 4503 Hybrid: Students are in the classroom studios split into two groups so that they can properly distance and each have their own work areas assigned. Instruction will occur with half the students expected to be physically in the blowing studio for up to 160 minutes on Fridays, while the other half alternates into the cold working and kiln working studio. Instructor observes via two webcams (or iPad) synchronous zoom for the entire session. Wednesday evening a 180 minute camera-on, computer or iPad (not phone) synchronous zoom ?All Glass Students? meeting is held. There is a Sunday session students attend as assigned where alumni (or grads) craft glass from the students? designs. Note, though, that while the instructor will be online (DL) the students are scheduled to be in the Sherman studios for at least 50%. Students should be given swipe access 7am-12pm 7 days a week so that they can properly clean and can work in the various studios outside of scheduled classes in scheduled time-slots. In support of the students outside work, we have twenty-four 3-month licenses from the Bullseye Glass Company for the Autumn (over a hundred masterclass and educational videos).
